Business model and competitive position

“NVIDIA Corporation operates as a data center scale AI infrastructure company in the United States, Taiwan, China, Hong Kong, Europe, and internationally.” (Semiconductors; 42,000 employees) Revenue was $81.61B in the most recent reported quarter, +85.2% against the same quarter a year earlier, at a 74.9% GAAP gross margin. No segment revenue mix, market-share estimate or installed-base figure is ingested here, so none is claimed.

The market debate

No admitted consensus to lean on, so the variant is ours to carry: the business shows positive free cash flow while the tape is constructive. The report weights the filed cash economics over the momentum, and says so. [\[DER\]](#)

Enterprise value	$4994.92B	market cap + debt – cash
EV / revenue (run-rate)	15.3x	EV / annualised latest quarter

Run-rate multiples annualise the latest quarter and are labelled as such; they are not trailing-twelve-month figures. [DER]

Peer multiples

Peer multiples: unavailable — no admitted peer set

Not valued here

Historical multiple band: unavailable — a point-in-time historical EPS series is not available on this tier, so a real historical multiple band cannot be built; the 52-week PRICE range divided by current EPS would be circular
Forward / bull-base-bear scenarios: unavailable — no admitted forward guidance or consensus estimates on this tier; bull/base/bear prices are withheld until the issuer release is ingested rather than derived from the price range
