| Massive 17.5% surge suggests fundamental news (likely partnership, FDA approval, or major contract win) driving immediate revaluation. Forward catalyst is November 5 earnings print where the market will validate whether today's move reflects sustainable inflection or one-time event-28 days out is ideal setup window for momentum extension into the print.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |

| Disconfirming: RS line NOT at new high despite being <1% from 52W high and base_tight is wide at 6.17 (well above the 2.0 VCP threshold), suggesting this was NOT a textbook coiled setup but rather a sloppy base that exploded on news. The 17.5% single-day move likely front-loads most of the catalyst impact, and without knowing the specific driver, there's risk this is a sell-the-news setup into earnings. However, the sheer volume (4.91x) and proximity to 52W high in a leading Healthcare sector with a 28-day runway to earnings creates follow-through potential if institutions continue to accumulate. Conviction: Medium. |

| Disconfirming: RS line is NOT at new high despite prox_52w of 99.9%, which downgrades this from an A to a B-the relative strength breakout hasn't confirmed yet. Volume at 1.61x is also below the 2.0x institutional surge threshold. However, the base_tight of 1.73 is elite (well below 2.0 VCP standard), RS vs SPY is strong at +27.8, and the 21-day runway to earnings in a leading Healthcare sector creates high probability of follow-through. The SMID headwind (IWM -3.9% vs SPY +1.3%) is a concern but Healthcare's outperformance partially offsets. Conviction: Medium. |
